

Mr. Normile's Math Classes

Extra Help Guidelines

Mr. Normile
September 1, 2009

Mr. Normile

I am available every day after school and during my free blocks. Appointments are recommended but not required. My schedule is posted on my web site (<http://lhs.lexingtonma.org/Teachers/Normile/>) and in my classroom (810). Look for me first in the math teacher office (room 713), and second in my classroom (810). If you do not see me, please ask one of the other teachers where I might be.

Math Tutoring Center

This center is staffed by community volunteers and is open every block during the school day (not after school, when you can meet with me). Students may simply drop in during any free block or study period. (As of September 2, the tutoring center is still being organized for the 2007-2008 school year. Watch for an announcement when it will open.)

Peer Tutoring Program

The National Honors Society operates a peer tutoring program where students who are strong in mathematics volunteer to tutor other students. Information and application forms are available in the library. Applications are also available from the Math Department secretary, Mrs. Bell (room 711).

Web Sites

See the separate document in my web pages that lists relevant math-oriented web sites. Note that some of these pages address study and test-taking skills.

Private Tutors

As a convenience for students and parents, the Math Department secretary, Mrs. Bell, maintains a list of individuals who offer private tutoring services in the Lexington area. The math department has not screened or evaluated these tutors in any way, and does not endorse or recommend any specific tutor.